Purano shei diner kotha ...

Ganges is a mystical river. Bhupen Hazarika serenade the Ganges with his song 'O Ganga tumi boicho keno?' She embodies beauty of a civilization, is representative of a rich cultural heritage and the essence of a faith fascinating. Ganges to us is a Goddess who is alive in our collective consciousness, whose significance in the day-to-day life cannot be put into words.

Barrackpore is an industrial town. In 1772, the first military barrack of India was set up by the East India Company on the banks of the Hooghly. Barrackpore cantonment enjoys the distinction of being the oldest of its kind in India.

Barrackpore offers a m`elange of a rich and diverse experiences. People from different cultures, different religious backgrounds and different strata of society live here peacefully.

Barrackpore's history is closely associated with the lives of important historical figures. With regards to education, the area is much ahead of the overall national averages. The literacy rate of the area is 87.51% in comparison to the national average of 64.84%.

It is also home to the only Military cantonment and Police Training Academy of West Bengal. There are also a number of reputed colleges, engineering and polytechnic institutes. Imbibing the neighborhood with a sense of civility, culture and purposefulness.

The Britishers made Kolkata, the capital of India along the Ganges, with the thought that their concept of London built along the river Thames will have some similarity. Right from Diamond Harbour to Raichak to Pujali and further down to Fort William, all their bastions and storehouses had a singular skew.

North Kolkata developed along the river Ganges too. Swami Vivekananda's Belur math is situated across the Ganges. The Dakhineswar Temple is also situated on the banks of The Ganges.

Historic Heart, Dynamic Future

Experience the serenity and purity of Ganges from the morning westwind whispers, to the evening Ghat aarti... at Barrackpore. This development, when ready, will be an award-winning blend of old and new: a river historic, seamlessly blends into contemporary designs and architecture, marking this a vibrant and exciting place to live.
